If the factory floor processes aren't right, the production engineer needs to sit down with the production crew and say, 'How can we fix this?'

One method used to describe this need is to estimate the percentage of the after-tax income you lived on while working that you will spend each year in retirement.