There is a lot of misleading information out there around what the normal level of testosterone is in both men and women. In a second model, males may engage in collective vigilance and anti-predator behaviours, and the key trade-off is between paternal care and investment in cooperative defence.

Social stability and support would be important, however, as the risk of relapse could be high during this period of discomfort.